Chapter 8

RESEARCH ON PARTICIPATIVE LEADERSHIP: A BIBLIOMETRIC ANALYSIS BETWEEN 1992 AND 2024

Nevra BAKER¹

INTRODUCTION

This study aims to analyze the past 32 years of participative leadership research, starting from 1992, when the first article on participative leadership by Yetton and Crawford (1992) appeared in Decision-Making and Leadership, until 2024. The author has aimed at carrying out a bibliometric analysis of participative leadership, since a significant amount of her earlier studies has contributed to literature on leadership (e.g. Baker, 2018a; Baker, 2018b; Baker, 2019a, 2019b, 2019c; Baker, 2020; Baker, 2022; Baker, 2023a; Baker, 2023b; Baker, 2023c).

The first article on participative leadership is written by Yetton and Crawford (1992) with the title “Reassessment of participative decision-making: A case of too much participation”. Starting with this study, much research has contributed to the literature on participative leadership. The ten most global cited articles on participative leadership are listed below, and their findings are summarized.

The most global cited article on participative leadership by Arnold, Arad, Rhoades, and Drasgow (2000) was published in the Journal of Organizational Behavior. This study describes the construction and empirical evaluation of a new scale for measuring empowering leader behavior.
