Kalabalıklar İçinde Bir “Ben” Şairi Attilâ İlhan ve Flanör

Şiirde anlam ve gerçeklik sorunsalı araştırmacıların zihnini uzun zamandır meşgul etmektedir. Şiirin üretimi sanatsal bir yaratı faaliyeti olarak düşünüldüğünde bu faaliyetin özne/sübjektif bir yaşantının izlerini taşıdığını görürüz. 19. yüzyıl Alman düşünürü Wilhelm Dilthey, sanatın yaşama deneyimine dayalı olduğu ve malzemesini yaşama deneyiminde bulduğu görüşündedir. Dilthey'e göre “sanat, gökyüzünü ve cehennemi, tanrıları ve hayaletleri bile ancak yaşama gerçekliğinde içerilmiş olan renklerle resmeder.”¹ Mark F. Sharlow, Şiirin Gizli Gerçeği’nde şiirin getirdiği özel bilginin birçok yönü olduğunu, bu yönlerden belki de en temel olanının özne gerçeklerinin bilgisi olduğunu vurgular.² Bu açıdan bakıldığında şiir, her şeyden önce şairin özne yaşantısına tutulmuş bir aynadır.

Modern Türk şiirinin “kaptan”ı Attilâ İlhan, doğumunun yüzüncü yılında, ortaya koyduğu metinlerin çoklu okumalara fırsat verecek bir malzeme barındırdığını bir kez daha hatırlatıyor bize. Öyle ki İlhan’ın şiirinde ideoloji, estetik, sosyoloji, psikanaliz ve tarihin (tarihsel gerçekliğin) izlerini sürmek pekâlâ mümkün. Diğer yandan şiirleri üzerinde yaptığımız yakın okumalar, onun, dokunduğu bütün konulara özne bir çerçeveden yaklaştığını ve bu çerçevenin mekân olarak büyük oranda modern kente dair hassasiyetler taşıdığına dair güçlü işaretler barındırıyordu. Bu nedenle bu çalışma Attilâ İlhan’ın bir şair olarak benliğini inşa ederken modern kente nasıl bir etkileşim içinde girdiğini anlama ve araştırma gayesi taşıyor.

Bir “Ben” Şairi

Attilâ İlhan’ın şiirlerini yazmaya başladığı 1940’lı yıllar, hem dünyada hem de Türk siyasi yaşamında çalkantılı olayların yaşandığı bir dönemdir. İlhan bir yandan yaşadığı dönemin siyasi, sosyal ve ekonomik gelişmelerine ve bir Türk aydını

Hilmi Yavuz’a göre de İlhan’ın şiiri bütün toplumcu-gerçekçi iddiasına rağmen bir “ben şiiri”dir. Yavuz’a göre “şiirlerinde ne kadar toplumcu duyarlılığı dile getiriyor olsa bile, bu toplumcu duyarlılığın arkasında Attilâ İlhan’ın kendi sübjektif/öznel duyarlılığı vardır.”

Özet

Bu araştırmanın amacı okul öncesi fen eğitiminde dengeli erken öğrenme döngüsünün öğretmenlerin pedagojik alan bilgileri üzerindeki etkisinin incelenmesidir. Durum çalışması olarak gerçekleştirilen bu araştırmaya MEB'e bağlı anaokulu ve ana sınıflarında görev yapan dört okul öncesi öğretmeni dâhil edilmiştir. Veriler Ders Planı Yapılandırma Formu (DPYF) ve Öğretim Temelli Görüşme Formu (ÖTGF) aracılığıyla toplanmıştır. Ayrıca bu veriler, gözlem sonuçları yardımıyla da zenginleştirilmiştir. Araştırmaya katılan öğretmenlerin ikisi MEB müfredatı ile diğer ikisi ise dengeli erken öğrenme döngüsü müfredatıyla altı hafta boyunca farklı konulardaki fen etkinliklerini uygulamışlardır. Katılımcıların fen eğitimine ilişkin pedagojik alan bilgilerindeki değişimi betimlemek için veriler üzerine derinlemesine doğrudan PAB analizi, numaralandırma yaklaşımı ve PAB haritalama analizi yapılmıştır. Veri analizleri sonucunda, fen eğitimi deneyimi arttıkça öğretmenlerin müfredat bilgisinin de geliştiği tespit edilmiştir. Ayrıca öğretmenlerin uygulamalarında en çok önem verdiği bilgi türü strateji bilgisi iken ölçme değerlendirme bilgisi açısından yetersiz oldukları ortaya çıkmıştır. Ayrıca araştır-

İletişim biliminin önde gelen dallarından biri olan halkla ilişkiler, psikoloji, sosyoloji, hukuk, siyaset gibi birçok disiplin ile ilişki halindedir. Medya ilişkilerinden kriz yönetimine, uluslararası halkla ilişkilerden kamu diplomasisine kadar uzanan çok boyutlu uzmanlık gerektiren birçok uygulama alanı bulunmaktadır. Bu kadar çok alandan beslenmesi halkla ilişkilerin önemini arttırmakta, eğitimini daha kapsamlı bir hale getirmektedir. Bu doğrultuda lisans programlarının müfredatlarında genel iletişim derslerinin haricinde öğrencilere teorik ve uygulama odaklı alan derslerinin sunulması önem kazanmaktadır. 2016 yılından bu yana iletişim eğitiminin kalitesinin yükseltilmesi için faaliyetlerini sürdüren İletişim Eğitimi Değerlendirme Kurulu (İLEDK), halkla ilişkiler ve tanıtım programları için ölçütler ortaya koymuştur. Bu ölçütler, müfredatları yeniden yapılandırmaya ve sürekli iyileştirmelerle güncellemeye teşvik etmektedir. Abstract

Neuropathic pain severely impacts quality of life and effective treatments are needed. To address this, the present study investigated the antihyperalgesic mechanisms of levetiracetam administered at the supraspinal level, together with its effects on ion channel activities. The ventral posterolateral nucleus of the thalamus was selected as the location for micro-injection. Thermal hyperalgesia and mechanical allodynia were assessed via in vivo experiments using the Hargreave's and e-Von Frey apparatus, respectively. Levetiracetam displayed statistically meaningful time and dose-dependent effects in the chronic constriction injury model, with statistical probability values less than 0.05. It was discovered that the antihyperalgesic effects were more pronounced in mechanical allodynia. Electrophysiological studies conducted through whole-cell patch clamp recordings indicated that levetiracetam tended to activate or increase the permeability of one or more channels for ion flow that are active only at hyperpolarized membrane potentials (–130 to –90 mV), suggesting the potential participation of hyperpolarization-activated cyclic nucleotide-gated, inwardly-rectifying K⁺, or G protein-gated inwardly-rectifying K⁺ channels. The findings could guide future drug development studies towards levetiracetam and its derivatives as effective treatments for neuropathic pain.

Abstract

Perhaps being the most multidisciplinary among all professional sciences is pharmacy. It is a perfect amalgam of quite different scientific disciplines. Every scientific branch of pharmacy is an applied science, and almost every year, very innovative developments and changes occur in these scientific branches. Therefore, pharmacy education is among the issues preserving importance all over the world. Both pharmacy students and diverse stakeholders in different working areas of pharmacy must be satisfied with the knowledge on continuous innovations. Therefore, pharmacy education must be handled with sensitivity and all the knowledge and skills acquired during the education must be "integrated delicately". Due to this highly dynamic characteristic of pharmacy education, there is a need for the continuous renewal of curricula and the creation of better models in pharmacy education. The creation of core competency programs (EczÇEP-2015 and EczÇEP-2019) is a manifestation of this need. Nowadays, pharmacy education is competency based in Türkiye as well. The only education model that can fully meet all these requirements is integrated education. It is impossible to meet these requirements with departments acting like independent republics. Providing "horizontal" and "vertical" integration of knowledge, integrated education ensures the most important scientific properties of today's science: "Multidisciplinary", "Interdisciplinary" and "Transdisciplinary" thinking and working. Integrated education models in other health professions (Medicine and Dentistry) can provide this for years. Therefore, the Anadolu University Faculty of Pharmacy switched to the spiral integrated education model (modular system) in 2017. Students have now started to graduate and enter professional life.

Abstract

Education in pharmaceutical sciences is a major concern in every nation. It has many stakeholders in different categories, who are in expectation of a satisfactory level in terms of skills, competencies, knowledge, etc. As the dynamics of pharmaceutical sciences have been changing due to the tremendous amount of pharmaceutical research, the requirement for a renewal of pharmacy education has emerged in Türkiye. In the year of 2015, this requirement was imposed by The Council of Higher Education of Türkiye (CoHE/YÖK) through the Medicine Health Sciences Education Council of Türkiye (MHSEC/TSBEK), as well as the Turkish Pharmacists' Association (Türk Eczacılar Birliği, TPA/TEB) plus the influences of global organisations like FIP (The International Pharmaceutical Federation), WHO (World Health Organisation). Subsequently, the Deans Council of Pharmacy Faculties of Türkiye (DCPF), consisting of 32 members, decided immediately to prepare a competency framework for pharmacists in Türkiye and established a sub-committee for this purpose. The sub-committee, which consisted of 25 members as Deans and Vice-Deans, has prepared a draft for the competency framework for the pharmacy education and to approve to DCPF, and then MHSEC/TSBEK. After final approval from CoHE/YÖK, the first core competency framework for pharmacists was implemented by the Pharmacy Faculties in Türkiye. After this framework, an updated version was completed in 2019 with a similar process. The second frame work (EczÇEP-2019) is more useful than the first one in terms of its applicability and practise.

Abstract

Flexible electrochemical sensors are pioneering sensing technology by providing innovative, flexible, and user-friendly solutions to many kinds of everyday issues. These flexible sensors are essential for the next-generation uses in industry, health, and the environment because of their ability for integrating flexibility, mechanical strength, high conductivity, functionality, high sensitivity, adjustable shape, desired size, and cost-effectiveness. The importance of using flexible carbon cloth electrodes (CCE) as sensing interfaces for various analytes was thoroughly discussed in this review paper. This was followed by an overview of the electrochemical sensing concept and related technical terms. Furthermore, the composition and properties of CCE relevant to electrochemical sensing were thoroughly evaluated, as well as compared to other conventional carbonaceous working electrodes. Furthermore, by considering several types of analytes such as neurotransmitters, pharmaceuticals, food safety, and heavy metal detection, it was showed that modifications and different approaches were required to create an effective CCE-based sensing interface. Overall, in this review study, we critically examine and attempt to narrow the gap between the principles of electrochemical sensors and the importance of flexible CCE in next generation cutting-edge applications.

Elektrokimya, çözelti/elektrot yüzeyinde meydana gelen elektron transferlerini inceleyen bir bilim dalıdır. Elektron transferi, yüzeydeki yükseltgenme veya indirgenme tepkimeleriyle gerçekleşir ve yükseltgenme veya indirgenme tepkimeleri, bir elektrokimyasal hücre içinde meydana gelmektedir. Temel olarak, elektrokimyasal hücre, kimyasal enerjiyi elektrik enerjisine dönüştüren bir yapıdır. Bu hücreler, elektrik üreten voltaik (galvanik) hücreler ve elektrik enerjisini kullanarak kimyasal tepkimeleri yönlendiren elektrolitik hücreler olmak üzere iki ana kategoriye ayrılır (Bagotsky, 2005; Brett, 2008; Plith, 2008; Zoski, 2007).

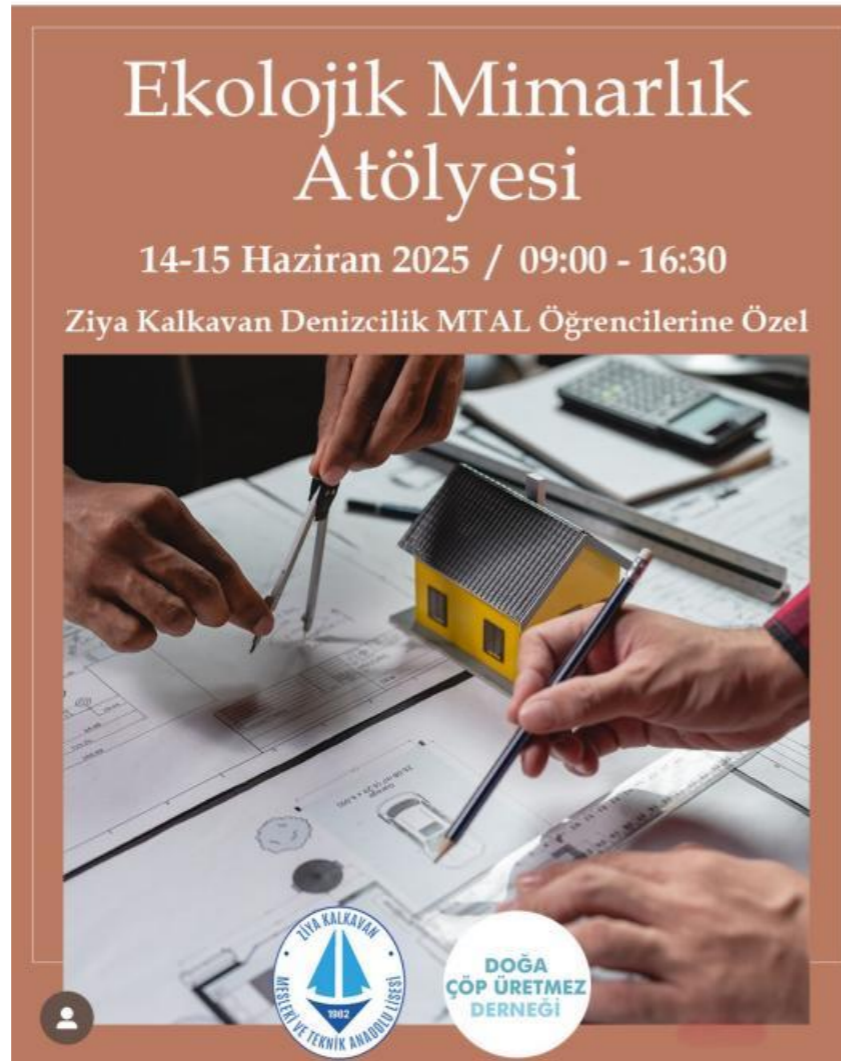

Elektrokimyasal hücre, basit bir şekilde, çözelti içine daldırılmış elektrotlardan oluşan bir yapıdır ve iki ana bileşeni bulunmaktadır. İlk bileşen, iyonların hareketiyle yükün taşındığı elektrolit ortamıdır. Elektrolitler, bir maddenin çözelti içinde çözünmesi, bir katı maddenin eritilmesi veya iyon iletimine izin veren katı maddelerin birleşimiyle oluşabilir. Elektrokimyasal hücredeki ikinci ana bileşen ise elektronların hareketiyle yükün taşınmasına olanak sağlayan elektrotlardır. Elektrotlar, elektrokimyasal özelliklerin takip edildiği malzemelerdir ve bilinen ilk türleri genellikle metallerden veya yarı iletkenlerden yapılmıştır (Carbó, 2009; Newman ve Thomas-Alyea, 2004).
