ABSTRACT

Climate change is a pressing global challenge that requires urgent action. The Paris Agreement and the 2030 Agenda of United Nations (UN) set clear global targets for emission reduction and sustainability to limit warming to 1.5 °C. Partnerships between standardization organizations are crucial in accelerating climate action. The Geneva Sustainability Centre (GSC) is at the forefront of healthcare sustainability, launching the Sustainability Accelerator Tool (SAT) in 2023 to help hospitals assess their environmental impact. In partnership with GSC, Joint Commission International (JCI) has integrated sustainability into its accreditation standards and will introduce the JCI-GSC Healthcare Sustainability Certification in 2025, built on the SAT. To accelerate the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), ISO and the UN formed a strategic partnership in 2023 to create the first global SDG standard. ISO has published the IWA 42:2022 Net Zero Guidelines and is developing its first global Standard on Net Zero, set for release in 2025. Additionally, ISO introduced the Climate Change Amendments, embedding climate considerations into over 30 existing management system standards, including ISO 9001. With these amendments now shaping all newly developed or revised standards, future updates to ISO 15189 will likely incorporate sustainability requirements, especially as ISO 9001 is an essential part of ISO 15189. Reducing operational emissions from healthcare and medical laboratories alone will not achieve net zero. A sector-wide approach is essential, tackling supply chain emissions from energy, pharmaceuticals, and medical devices. Combating climate change requires a coordinated, cross-sector effort, making international collaboration indispensable. This review highlights key global frameworks, standards, guidelines, and initiatives that have evolved through collaboration to help healthcare organizations, including medical laboratories, to advance sustainability and climate resilience.

A book chapter titled "Carbon Sensor Devices for Disease Detection" by Dr. Cem ERKMEN, a faculty member of the Department of Analytical Chemistry, has been published in the international book Handbook of Carbon Sensors: Understanding and Applications, released by CRC Press.

12 Carbon Sensor Devices for Disease Detection

Vildan Sanko, Meltem Okan, Cem Erkmén, and Pattan Siddappa Ganesh

12.1 INTRODUCTION

Electrochemical sensors have become invaluable in modern diagnostics, enabling the precise and timely detection of various biomarkers associated with various diseases<sup>1</sup> Their intrinsic advantages, such as high sensitivity, specificity, rapid response, and the capability for miniaturization, make them ideal candidates for point-of-care testing (POCT).<sup>2-4</sup> Carbon-based materials stand out due to their exceptional electrical properties, chemical stability, and versatile surface chemistry among the materials explored for constructing these sensors.<sup>5,6</sup> For this purpose, this chapter focuses on designing and developing electrochemical carbon sensor devices for disease detection, highlighting the critical role these devices play in advancing diagnostic technologies.

Carbon materials, including graphene, carbon nanotubes (CNTs), graphite, fullerene, and carbon black (CB), offer unique physicochemical properties that can be fine-tuned to meet the specific demands of electrochemical sensing.<sup>7,8</sup> Graphene, for instance, with its two-dimensional structure and high surface area, provides an excellent platform for electron transfer, making it highly suitable for detecting electroactive species in biological samples.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, CNTs, with their remarkable mechanical strength and electrical conductivity, facilitate the development of sensors with enhanced sensitivity and stability. These properties enable carbon-based sensors to detect various biomarkers, ranging from small molecules like glucose and dopamine to larger macromolecules like proteins and nucleic acids.<sup>10</sup>

ÖZET

Bu çalışmada, Hypericum L. cinsine ait H. calycinum türünün toprak üstü kısımları anatomik açıdan detaylı bir şekilde incelenmiştir. Cinsin Türkiye'de 119 taksonu bulunmaktadır. Bunlardan 49'u endemiktir. Bunlardan en bilineni H. perforatum L. türü, yara, yanık, depresyon tedavilerinde etkili olduğu klinik çalışmalarda gösterilmiştir. Türün gövde enine kesitlerinde 4 adet gövde kanadı, kanatlarında şeffaf gland, ve öz bölgesinde de şeffaf gland'a rastlanılmış, ayrıca çalışmada diğer çalışmalardan farklı olarak gövde boyuna da kesitler alınmıştır. Yaprakların hipostomatik, stoma tiplerinin anizostik ve anomostik olduğu, mezofil tabakasının bifasiyal olduğu görülmüştür. Sepal'in üst tabakasında iki sıralı epidermis ve sıralı bir şekilde şeffaf gland rastlanılmış, Petal'in mezofil tabakasında sıralı şeffaf gland tespit edilmiştir. Anter kısmının üç teka'dan oluştuğu, ovaryum'da C tipi salgı kanalının çok yoğun bir şekilde yer aldığı kaydedilmiştir. Bu araştırmadaki amaç, bitkilerin sadece vejetatif kısımlarının değil, generatif kısımlarının da incelenip bir bütün olarak düşünülmesinin gerekliliğini, bunların sonucunda bitkiler hakkında daha doğru bilgilere ulaşılabilineceğini ve taksonomik sınıflandırma için de yardımcı olacağını vurgulamaktadır.

Etik Kaygılar

Akademik Dürüstlük ve İntihal Riski

- Katılımcıların büyük çoğunluğu (n=8), YZ'nin bilinçsiz kullanımının intihale yol açtığına inanıyor.
- YZ'nin ancak destek aracı olarak kullanılması gerektiği belirtildi.
- "YZ sürecin bir parçası olmalı, tamamı değil." – K7

Etik Farkındalıkta Farklılıklar

- YZ çıktısını kendi cümleleriyle yeniden yazarak kullanıyor. (K2, K3, K9, K10)
- Uygun atıf yapılırsa etik sorun olmayacağını düşünüyor. -K8
- Tespit yazılımları nedeniyle etik dışı kullanımı düşük riskli buluyor. -K9

Belirsizlik ve Bilgi Eksikliği

- Bazı katılımcılar, YZ'nin etik sınırlarını net çizemediğini ifade etti.
- "Yardım ile hazır içerik arasındaki çizgi bulanık." – K7
- "Etik kurallar hakkında pek bilgim yok." – K4

Toplumsal ve Çevresel Boyut

- K5, YZ'nin enerji tüketimi ve karbon ayak izi nedeniyle etik açıdan sorgulanması gerektiğini belirtiyor.

Genel Değerlendirme:

- Öğrenciler etik konulara duyarlı, ancak üniversitelerden net yönergeler ve bilinçlendirme çalışmaları bekleniyor.
