Modern Design Rural Transformation Online Conference

In our country, where a large part of its land is located in an earthquake zone, in particular, the risk of earthquakes in economically and population important cities such as Istanbul is constantly being kept on the agenda of the public. Due to an earthquake that may occur in these cities, the public should be kept on constant alert against earthquakes. However, in our country, not only big cities but also many small settlements in rural areas have a significant earthquake risk.

For this reason, as Istanbul Aydın University Disaster Training Application and Research Center (AFAM), we are conducting studies to increase the importance of earthquake preparedness studies to be carried out in rural areas. One of the works we have carried out within the scope of these studies is the webinar series. The first of these webinar series BG Dost Construction General Manager Ali Gültaş and It was held under the title of Modern Design Rural Transformation on May 17, 2020, with the participation of AFAM director Prof. Dr. Mehmet Fatih Altan as a speaker. In the webinar, taking into account the regional structure characteristics of our country, it was evaluated how the earthquake resistant building designs could be with more modern designs and compatible with the region.

Architect Design Online Conference in Accordance with the Local Texture

To raise awareness for the creation of earthquake-resistant building stock in rural settlements Another one of the works we carry out as AFAM in order to achieve this is the Architectural Design Online Conference in Compliance with the Local Texture that we held on May 31, 2020.

Architect Mustafa Karakeçili and In this webinar attended by AFAM Director Prof. Dr. Mehmet Fatih Altan as a speaker, the importance of architecture in accordance with the local texture in the buildings to be built in rural areas in our country was discussed. In the webinar, the achievements of the design suitable for the local texture, especially in terms of environmental sensitivity, were evaluated in detail with the participants.
